

Summer is halfway over! But there is still a lot you can do with your student. If you're traveling, use it as an opportunity to have conversations about interests, colleges, and career opportunities. Staying home still allows you to explore opportunities locally at colleges, universities, and the public library programs.

ALL GRADES

- Make sure any summer reading for school has been completed; book lists from the school, your public library, or other sources are great lists to find a wide variety of topics and diverse points of view.

Have questions about setting your student up for success?

INCOMING SENIOR

- If you have an opportunity, visiting colleges over the summer can be a great way to help your student refine their interests and wants post-high school.
- Help your student think about taking the SAT or ACT exams. These are still important to various trade schools, colleges, and scholarships. Create a parent account at www.ACT.org or www.collegeboard.org.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE!

- Confirm and schedule any last doctor or health visits so all health issues are documented and addressed before your student heads off to college, the military, or trade school.
- Take time to look up or call the college, trade school, or military academy to see what support resources they have for students. Make sure you can understand what resources are available so you can have a conversation with your student about their needs before they head off in the late summer or early fall.
